

David Brown
Chief executive, Transport for the North

David is a prominent leader in Northern transport, with more than 25 years' experience in both the public and private sectors covering all modes of public transport.

As chief executive of TfN, David is responsible for transforming connectivity and driving economic growth in the region. He will oversee the development of TfN into a statutory body, bringing together the Northern transport authorities to allow the region to speak with a single voice on the big transport decisions which will benefit the North as a whole.

David joined TfN from his post as chief executive/director general at Merseytravel and head of paid service at the Liverpool City Region Combined Authority. Prior to this, David was director general of South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive.
